

NCSU Graduate Journal of History

Spring 2014

Vol. 2

Published by the History Graduate Student Association (HGSA) at North Carolina State University

Introduction and Acknowledgments

The NCSU Graduate Journal of History is an annual peer-reviewed, electronic publication edited by the History Graduate Student Association at North Carolina State University. The Graduate is dedicated to publishing original, historical research by graduate students in the United States and beyond. The scope of topics and time periods presented in The Graduate is inherently broad, as it reflects the breadth of fields and sub-fields attracting graduate students to historical studies in colleges and universities. Equally diverse in representation are the methods and approaches student authors use to interrogate the past and present.

Currently, the Graduate publishes notable papers given at the North Carolina State University History Graduate Student Conference. Papers are nominated by faculty commentators serving on student panels and subjected to a review process. HGSA welcomes all graduate students to submit abstracts on any historical topic to our annual history conference for consideration of presentation and publication. For information about submitting to our annual conference, visit the History Graduate Student Conference webpage at history.ncsu.edu.

Special thanks go to:

Dr. Susanna Lee, faculty adviser for the journal;

Drs. Daniel Bolger, Katherine M. Charron, Klaus Larres, Alicia McGill, and Stephen Vincent, faculty reviewers for the journal;

Kelsey Griffin, NCSU graduate student and founder of the journal; and

The entire NCSU History Department, for its continued support.
